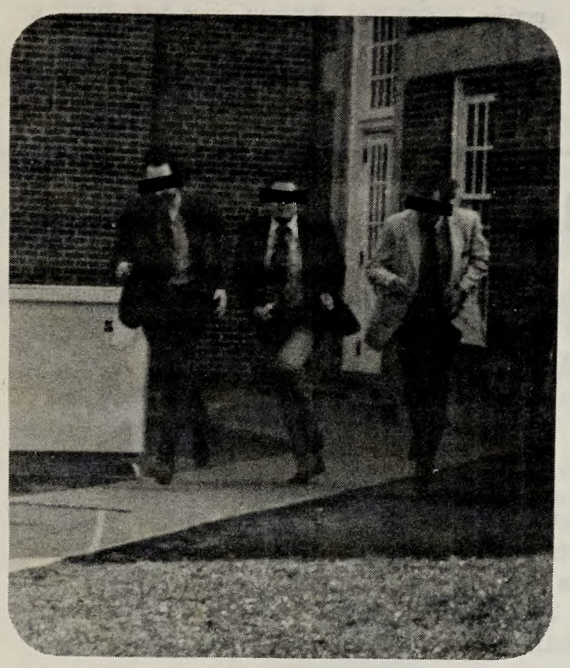
WARTBURG STRUMPET

Vol. 66 Wartburg College, Waverly, Iowa, April 27, 1973 Number 25



Three faculty members dash to the Union in a moment of pressing urgency and inner tension.

Editor's Note

This paper is called the Wartburg Strumpet, it really is. Thrown together (more or less) by the History of Satire seminar, this hound intends to present a satiric look at you, us, them, and other handy pronouns. The opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect those of Wartburg College, Robert Gremmels, Dr. Bachman, Ms. Bertha Mead, Steve Garrett, Lewis Levick, the Council on Religious Life, the "W" club, or Haile Selassie. Any similarity to real persons, living or otherwise, is simply not our fault. This paper demonstrates what can happen when one completely disregards the style book, the Ten Commandments, and warnings on the sides of cigarette packages.

As Kurt Vonnegut Jr. says after a particularly spectacular death, "So it goes!"

'Constipation' Prompts Rest Room Rearrangements

Rest room arrangements will be changed in Luther Hall beginning next fall to "relieve the constipated situation caused," according to Dr. James Moy, director of student affairs, "by inadequate facilitilies."

Noting a recent Reader's Digest survey which showed that private college faculty members are using the rest room 17percent more often than in 1971.Moy stated that the effect is "no less noticeable" in Luther Hall

Of the six rooms now in operation, one is reserved for faculty men, one for regular men, one for women, Room 314 for janitors only and one each for men and women below the auditorium balcony (though they're locked except during the Artist Series).

As of Sept. 1 there will be a tenured faculty men's room, a not-tenured faculty men's a tenured faculty women's, a non-tenured faculty women's and students will share Room 314 with the janitors. The two rooms below the auditorium balcony will remain locked except during the Artist Series.

The room presently serving as a women's lounge will be converted into the tenured faculty women's rest room.

When asked about this last arrangement Moy responded, "Something has to give somewhere."

Anyone interested in the specific planned locations is encouraged to check the diagram scribbled on the stall wall of the Faculty Men's Room on the first floor of Luther Hall next Monday and Tuesday from 3-5 p.m. A college official will be present at that time to accompany women and men who are not normally allowed.

Bachman's 'Absolutist Ethic' First of Revealing Lectures

President John W. Bachman will give the first in a series of ten faculty lectures Monday, May 30, at 7:30 p.m. in Voecks Auditorium.

In this series titled "Re-Orientation: Changing Perspectives in an Age of Change," sundry faculty members (none of whom works in the sundries department) will reveal the changes in outlook brought about by their continuing research and reflection.

The following is the order of delivery:

President John W. Bachman: Notes Toward an Absolutist Ethic, or An Awful Lot of Sincere Christians Disagree Because They're Stupid

Prof. Robert Dell: Lesser Breeds Without the Law--The Ethical Responsibilities of the American Empire

Prof. John Craft: The Wit and Wisdom of Sigmund Freud

Prof. Phillip A. Kildahl: Sic Transit Gloria Mundi: The Irrelevance of the Classics

Prof. Herman Diers: Privilege and Responsibility: Social Justice in South Africa

Mr. William Hamm: In Defense of the Large University

Prof. William Theisen: Cracking Down on Welfare Chiselers

Prof. Galen Eiben: Laissez-Faire in the natural Order: The Case Against Ecology

Prof. Karl D. Briner: Four More Years: An Argument for Abolishing the 21st Amendment

Prof. Ronald Alexander: Behaviorism: The Key to Understanding Man, or Why I Want to be Just Like B. F. Skinner When I Grow Up.

Additional lectures may still be scheduled. Send your suggestions to the security office in a plain brown wrapper.

Students Push Dope Experts for Answers

By Sergeant Ron Biggest

Uncontrollable substances--barbiturates, amphetimines, marijuana, LSD--drugs. "What are they? What do they look like? How come? What can they do for me?" and other questions asked by your run-of-the-mill hippy freak.

TWO WARTBURG Community Police Department Police Officers answered those questions, along with several others which could not be printed due to their suggestive nature, in their presentation "Uncontrollable substances--barbiturates, amphetimines, marijuana, LSD--drugs. 'What are they? What do they look like? How come? What can they do for me?' and other questions asked by your run-of-the-mill freak," for Resident Assistants, Pre-policemen and any other loyal American within a three-block radius.

"Marijuana is by far the most common uncontrollable substance within the three-block radius," remarked Sergeant Ron Biggest of the Wartburg Community Police Department. "Some of it's really pretty good, I hear."

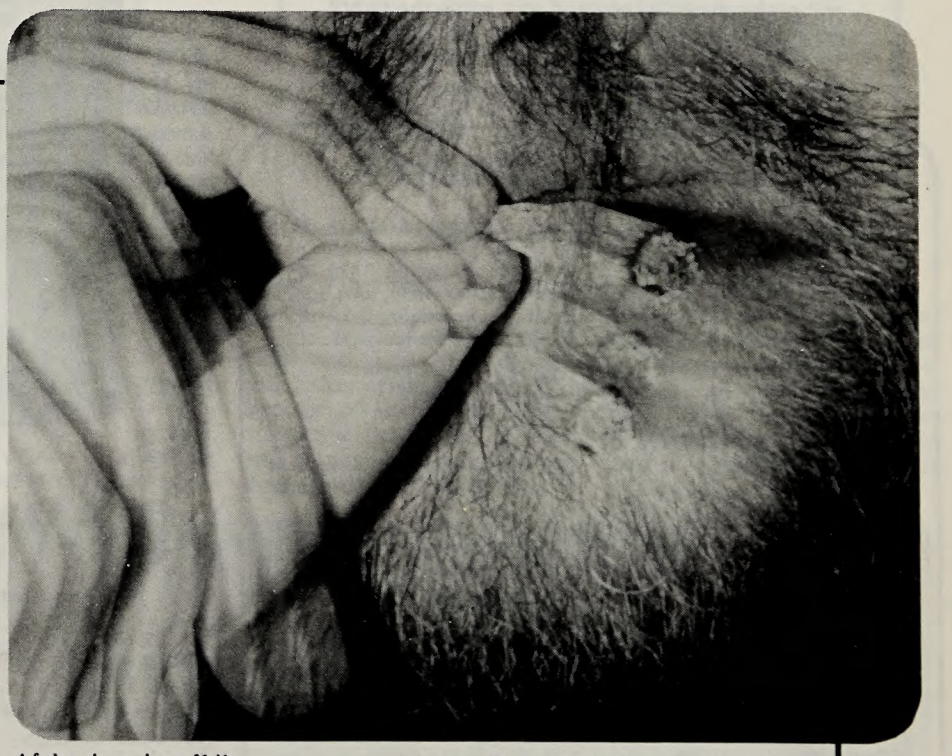
To remind those attending the meeting of the smell of dope, a sample lid was lit releasing the distinctive odor or burning marijuana. Patrolman Dan Dan stated that because of the distinctive smell "users often burn incense to disguise it so when the cops come to bust 'em at least it won't smell like dope."

Several demonstrations were given of complicated home-made pipes used to smoke dope, two of which had been confiscated from Garrett's office earlier this year.

Sergeant Biggest of the Wartburg Community Police Department commented that until that time "the campus dope pushers were relatively unknown. Garrett split the case wide open, exposing them all."

ALTHOUGH MARIJUANA is the most widely abused drug, cases involving LSD, DDT, cocaine, aspirin, heroin, Nite-Al ("downer'). Ecksedrin and coffee ("upper" or "high"), and Katnip have been reported within the three-block radius and any loyal American should surely do his "darndest" to prevent this uncontrolled abuse.

In answering questions about various drugs and their effects, Sergeant Biggest of the Wartburg Community Police Department said, "Yes," "Boy, you'd better believe it!" and "No, that smells more like the Afghanistani stuff."



An added danger to uncontrolled drug abuse is that there is greater chance of misrepresentation when selling the drugs. Sergeant Biggest of the Wartburg Community Police Department commented that it is quite common for dope pushers to sell dope which is not what it's bragged to be.

Patrolman Dan Dan mentioned a rumor reported to him by a co-ed. Dan said she said "some jock beat the crap out of a freak because his dope was no good."

WHEN ASKED how the police force detects drugs and users, Sergeant Biggest of the Wartburg Community Police Department replied that unless there is cause to believe that some one is in the possession of drugs, a search and seizure warrant must be obtained before the search and seizure can be used as the only evidence against the criminal.

As a final remark, Sergeant Biggest of the Wartburg Community Police Department said that when encountering someone who is experiencing a drug trip, "though the welfare of the State is of first priority, getting that criminal to a hospital or physician for medical treatment runs a close second."

SBP speaks

Wartburg College is not dead! A lot of people have just left campus for May Term, that's all. But there are things going on on campus, too. You just have to think about it for a while.

Consider all the fine courses offered for all those who couldn't afford to escape the Wartburg Community. I understand most students here on campus are taking advantage of them.

I think it would be appropriate here to express appreciation to the professors who are teaching the courses on campus. Just think--they gave up a fine opportunity to come up with a course that they could've taught in Texas, California, Europe or some other far-out and away place. But no, they're spending May Term on campus just like you and I. They certainly deserve recognition.

What else is there to do here? Well, you could visit my office during the hours of 2-4 p.m. Monday through Thursday. I'd be happy to help you pass the time and term away.

I would like to remind all students at this TIME that during these opening weeks of my reign I forsee NO EASY ROAD AHEAD. No, if you stop to consider what a mess was DUMPED IN MY LAP you'd wonder how I could've accepted my CALLING.

But it has all been SHOWN to me.

Who among you will deny that what this campus needs is REFORM to REUNITE us in one WORD. And that word is DIVERSIFICATION! If we all openly accept diversity then we have at least TWO things in common. First of all, we all attend WARTBURG COLLEGE. And second of all, we are all DIFFERENT.

Now, let's take a CLOSE LOOK at what I mean by " we are all different." I don't mean that we all attend different colleges. What I mean is that we all THINK differently, ACT differently, and DRINK different kinds of beer.

What more is NEEDED for a UNITED CAMPUS than our sharing WHAT WE HAVE IN COMMON--our diversity?

What MORE can I say?

(Well, I guess I could add that it'll take more than my explaining it all. It'll take active participation on your part, for withou it we will not be diversified. Without your participaton, diversification will never become a unifying force at Wartburg.)

--John Bunchy

Letter to the Editor

I really enjoyed your editorial last week just like I've always enjoyed your column. You have such a way with words!

I would have written earlier and I imagine many of your other followers would have too except that you seem to say it all, and all I could do is agree. I don't always understand what you seem to say but even when I don't I get such a thrill because I can just imagine how profound it really is!

Sorrow fills my soul when I hear that you're too busy to write this May Term. That is how much I've enjoyed your writing.

I will certainly miss it when you graduate next Christmas or whenever. I assume that you do plan to write again next fall.

By the way, please let your father and me know when you do plan to graduate.

BY A FACULTY MEMBER

The whole thing was disgusting, just disgusting. I found it as repulsive and nauseating as I find B. F. Skinner and the rest of those assinine behaviorists. And that, that theatre down town shows so many previews of coming attractions that I'm glad I came in after the house lights were down. And I'm proud to say that I walked out of that show early. Why that revolting skin flick probably went on for several minutes more after my exit.

Hell, the only reason I went was to show you students that philosophers are not the dull and boring characters we're always stereo-typed to be. Can you say that I could go to "Oh! Calcutta!" and still be a dull person?

Oh, really?

How about if I go to "Last Tango in Paris" and make my entrance and exit while the lights are on?

Hope it's better than "Oh! Calcutta!" The whole thing was disgusting, just disgusting!

Box Assignment Seen 'Discriminatory'

Ms. Brawl Esswunder has charged the Wartburg Postal Office with sex discrimination in connection with the assignment of female and male boxes.

Ms. Esswunder feels it's "unnatural and discriminatory to have segregated mail boxes. Not only that but the practice also bars female students from being assigned to the lower numbered, easier to remember boxes."

In defense of the present situation Mr. Levick, director of the Student Union, commented that it "provides more privacy for the ladies restroom which is opposite the women's mail boxes."

"This is especially important," he added, "now that Steve (the "Bomb") Garrett is no longer with us. He kept a pretty close eye on the ladies room, kept male students from the vicinity, and since he left there have been several reports of males 'gawking' near that rest room."

An informal poll conducted by the Strumpet showed student opinion regarding segregated mail boxes to vary.

"Perhaps it would be the best to leave them as they are," commented freshman Velly Shy. "That way we won't hear the boys swear when they don't get any mail."

Junior Ms. Barb Ucksom thinks it "silly" to share dorm buildings and then segregate in the post office: "I voted for co-ed floors earlier this year. I really like the idea of sharing between the sexes. But now Wartburg says I can't share my box. That's kinda silly."

Sophomore Johnny Kleenkut feels they should be left as they are: "That way we won't hear the girls swear when they don't get any mail."

Senior Bert (the "Bruiser") Brite said he doesn't think the change should be made: "I had a lot of trouble rememberin' da one I got now til Coach helped me write it down in my notebook."

Wartburg Found Lacking Funds, Regents Compromise

NEWS BUREAU

Though it won't do much for the name of Wartburg College, i.e. it's not good public relations information (and that, after all, is our number one priority), this office is duty bound to report that this college is lacking sufficent building funds to meet the increasing demands for both a campus worship center and improved recreational facilities.

The Board of Regents decided on a compromise in a recondite (big word there to keep the meaning and its horrendous implications from you) meeting held last Wednesday.

At that time they allocated funds for a combination worship-recreation center.

When asked if he didn't find the combination a bit sacreligious, one member of the Board of Regents commented, "Our bodies are the temples of the Lord, and it is our duty to keep them in good condition."

Unique to the center will be its Olympic-size swimming pool-baptismal font. On Sunday mornings, as needed, the pool will be filled with Holy Water to be used in the baptism ceremony. At other times the water will be chlorinated for swimming use.

When asked if he didn't find the combination a bit sacreligious, another member of the board replied, "Well, no one will have to make a special effort to heat the Holy Water to a temperature suitable for a baby's head. It will run through the regular piping and be heated by the regular heater."

Hours for swimming will be designated after the building is completed.

Faculty and students are asked to restrain themselves from having children during the months of May, June, July and August when no campus religious services are held.

An indoor track will surround the sanctuary of the church. During track meets the altar will double as an announcer's station.

When asked if he didn't find the combination a bit sacreligious, yet another member of the board said, "That point was brought up but was kinda forgotten when the situation reminded someone of a Pollock joke."

Additional seating for church services will be found in the bleachers surrounding the track.

The center will also include offices for all faculty members of the Physical Education Department, handball courts, tennis courts, basketball courts, gymnastics room, weight lifting room, and possibly even an office for the campus chaplain.

The building is slated for completion in May, 1967.

The old gymnasium will be turned over to the W-Club for a private clubhouse.

Wartburg's newest academic program, Chrysalis, has been exposed as a front organization for the CIA, Ramparts Magazine disclosed yesterday.

It's the best way we can keep tabs on some of the college's longhaired freaks," director K. D. Briner said (shown here in uniform.) The startling development has shaken the entire Wartburg community, but Briner is firm in his conviction that his is a patriotic duty. "We (the CIA) have long believed that programs like Chrysalis give aid and comfort to the subversive elements in our society. It was suspected that agents of the Pinko group were about to urge distribution of birth control pills on campus--just another example of the lengths to which the international conspiracy will go to undermine the morality of Wartburg, the May Term, and the nation."

Caf Schedule

In continuation of our policy of providing "Ethnic Nights" at the cafeteria, the schedule for next week's evening meals is as follows:

Monday night: German night--creamed, chipped bratwurst on toast, sauerkraut jello, a slice of the economic pie, black beer.

Tuesday night: Isreali night--creamed, chipped matzos on toast, bagel jello, hot potatoes, salad with rich dressing, kosher Gator aid.

Wednesday night: Italian night--creamed, chipped lasagna on toast, a piece of the action, pizza jello, Marlon Brandy.

Thursday night: Mexican night--creamed chipped peyote floating over a slice of toast, tabasco jello, tequila.

Friday night: Canadian night--Creamed, chipped water on toast, flavorless jello, salt, French Fries, water.

Saturday night: American night--pizza, tacos, borsch, banana jello, candy bars, coke.

Sunday night: Appalaccia night--(no meal on Sunday night).

Proposals Made, Coffee Drunk, Decision Pending

The Wartburg College Building Planning Committee had coffee last Wednesday over plans to put the little used Student Union to better use. Though no decision was reached two proposals were made at that time.

The first of them came from Mr. "Buzz" Levick, director of the Union. He felt that since basketball is of such great interest at Wartburg, the cafeteria ceiling should be knocked out and the resulting area be turned into a basketball court.

"If the college responds to the students' interests by cancelling classes for those Kansas City-bound students going on a wild weekend," said Levick, "then surely it ought also to respond to that interest by acting on my proposal."

Coach Levick felt that this would be "beneficial" in an other way. Given the proposed renovation, he said, "all the athletic supporters at Wartburg could see the trophies that my team and I have won."

Presently the team trophies are being stored in the Buzz Levick Hall of Memories, located in the outer chambers of his office.

President John W. Bachman's Council on Keeping the Green Grass Green (CKGGG) presented the second proposal.

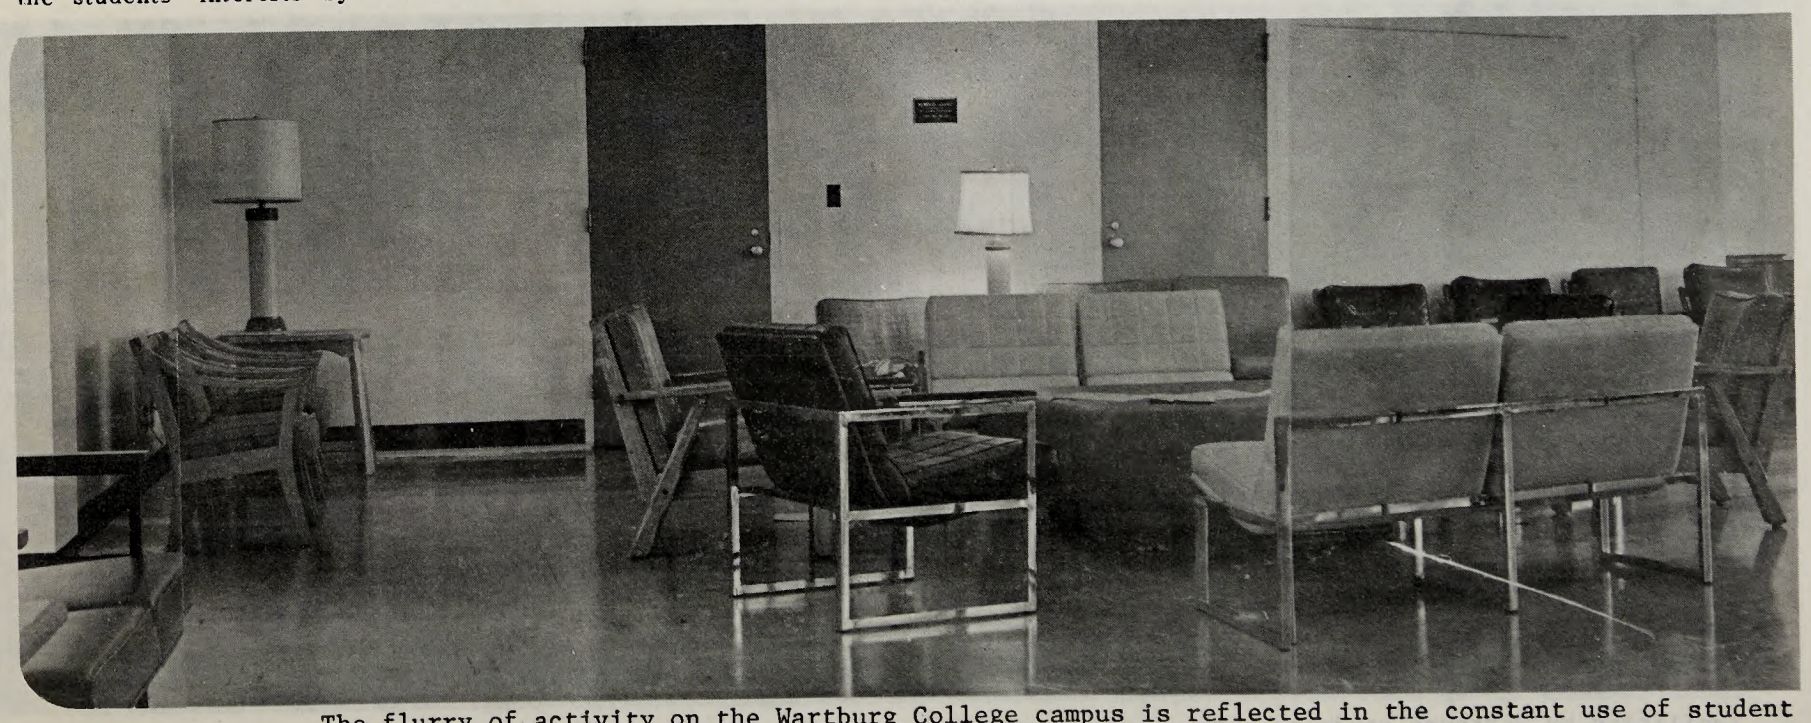
That organization asked that the Union be demolished and green grass planted in its place.

Dr. Galen Eiben, spokesman for the group, mentioned that "the green grass would provide enough oxygen to sustain a student for a term, providing we don't have hard winters."

If accepted, the proposal would allow the Social Activities Committee to sponsor croquet tournaments which would be held between 2-4 p.m. on every first and third Sunday during May Term.

The Food and Garbage Disposal Association has agreed with either proposal. Don Juhl, director of that organization, mentioned that "with a minimal raise in the food budget we should be able to work something out with Roy's."

The Building Planning Committee will make its final decision over coffee in the Den a week from next Wednesday. Also on the agenda is the question of where they will hold their meetings once a proposal is adopted.



The flurry of activity on the Wartburg College campus is reflected in the constant use of student the Student Union this year and, thanks to the thoughtfullness of the students, the furniture is still "good as new"

His Imperial Majesty, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, greets President John W. Bachman. Behind them are Dr. Emmanual Gebre Sillasse, and an unidentified man. John W. Unidentified. Behind all of them are not radio antennas.

Administrative Attempt at Dismissal Detracts Naught From the Truth

Despite administration attempts to dismiss the affair as inconsequential, speculation continued to mount that an attempt was recently made by Wartburg College security operatives to spy on the student-recruiting and fund-raising operations of Upper Iowa College.

Though the precise sequence of events has been obscured by resignations, denials, and attacks on the integrity of the college press, the Strumpet has been able to piece together a good part of the background of this unsavory scandal.

ADMINISTRATIVE CONCERN apparently began when it became clear that Upper Iowa was mounting a desperate campaign for funds and students in order to stave off bankruptcy.

"You have to remember," says one W. C. insider, "that there was a whole new crowd running the show over there. The old bunch--the legendary Garbee wing of the college--had failed and had run up a big debt in the process. So in comes this new crowd. They're new to the area, and they obviously don't understand the rules of the game. We had to see that Wartburg stayed in the winner's circle. Maybe we got a little zealous."

The actual "dirty tricks" operation seems to have centered around the campus security office.

There, a mysterious new man, reportedly an ex-police agent and formerly successful Southern California operative, had assembled an improbable crew who seemed almost invivisible behind a sophisticated array of serveillance paraphernalia: radios, walkie-talkies, telephone tape-recorders, and the like.

"You couldn't really call our man one of the Orange County boys," personnel aide James Moy was heard to observe, "but you'd be in the right neighborhood."

JUST WHEN IT APPEARED that the whole caper might go undetected, a fearless investigation by Waverly police led to the sudden and mysterious resignation of Steven Garrett, reportedly the mastermind of the whole "security" operation.

Administration sources were quick to deny that his resignation had any connection with the reported bugging- and -wiretap scheme. "It wasn't that kind of bombshell," said one presidential aide adding, "Don't quote me on that."

Presidential press panjandrum Duane Schroeder denied that the president, reportedly in seclusion at the presidential retreat in Addis Ababa, knew anything about the case.

"It was a third-rate caper, obviously run by amateurs," Schroeder insisted. Little-known executive-suite insider Merritt Bomhoff, long a kingpin in college fund-raising circles, tried to treat the whole thing as a laughing matter: "Upper Iowa bugs me," he quipped, "but I've always turns the other cheek."

MOST PUZZLING to veteran observers of institutional politics was the motivation for the whole affair.

"What did they have to gain?" asked investigative reporter Bill Gibson. "Come September, only one college is going to come out on top, and Wartburg had it made. Nobody had to help UIC go down the drain. They were doing a great job by themselves."

As more and more information began to leak out, an even more disturbing question was in the air: How high up did collusion in the operation go?

"I've been trying not to ask that question," replied one veteran Wartburg political infighter; "I have too much respect for the office of the presidency to believe that The Man was anything more than a busy official victimized by over-zealous assistants."

"Maybe," he added, brightening, "he'll call a Convo and clear up the whole thing."

Ich Schmelta Fert Fraternity Combination of TKE, PBK

Permission has been granted by the Board of Regents to allow a residential fraternity to become an approved campus organization.

The German fraternity Ich Schmelta Fert (ISF) will be accepting pledges for the 73-74 academic year starting in the fall. The fraternity, whose motto is "Liberty, Fraternity, Sorority," will be housed in the Chapel-Aud.

This organization is a combination of two older frats. TKE (Theological Kinder Ekheden) and Phi Beta Kappa.-

A get-together will be sponsored by the campus representatives of the frat next Monday night at eight o'clock. A discussion of the works of James Joyce will be followed by a kegger.

Book Review

BY A REVIEWER

We of the Wartburg Strumpet feel honored, for we have been allowed to preview chapters from two new books by current American authors before publication. We feel both are excellent examples of current American fiction.

Excerpt from the book:

I'm Just A Simple American Boy Who Witnessed The Firebombing of Dresden

By Kurt Vannabuyaduck Jr.

"I witnessed the firebombing of Dresden, I really did. I saw it with my own two eyes, I saw it. I watched the bombs coming down on Dresden, I remember it. I saw them, you bet."

Excerpt from

Carp Fishing on the Cedar

By Richard Broughtagun

"I gazed at the wise old carp with its bank book eyes, and saw the minnows in the pond dance the hootcheykoo. The overhead railway that was the pond laughed at my ice cream hat. Carp Fishing on the Cedar came up to me, grabbed my arm and said, "Time to go to the bank again, Dick." As I turned like a kolache to leave, Carp Fishing on the Cedar called after me. "Gee, Dick, you're really a groovy guy."."

Castle or College?--A Comparative Malady

By BLAIR ANDERSON

Within the small hamlet of a provincial midwestern town there remains to this day a school of higher learning. This school is much like its namesake in Germany in several interesting facets. Wartburg (be it castle or college) has a formidable wall for protection or isolation. The castle fortress is of stone and mortar while the college's ivory tower is constructed of lofty ideals.

Within the Wartburg in Iowa there exists a mock, neo-, or sub-society (do not confuse these terms with the theorists' words "healthy educational environment."for they describe the same thing). This society has much in common with the pre-Reformation feudal systems.

OUR LORD recently made a pilgrimage to the dark, mysterious, and pagan continent of Africa. Although no conversions were accounted for, the crusade was termed "successful" for it suffered no casualties.

The peons (frosh), vassals (sophs), peasants (juniors), and pages (seniors) struggle for survival. Perhaps our struggle is less physical than our forefathers' but it is just as real. Just as they tilled the land with crude implements to produce an occasional rotten potato, the student today cultivates his mind with crude "educational" tools trying to produce a certificate.

Although catholicism was widespread, many feudal societies indulged in sadistic rituals. Lately, much of the dismay of sociologists, a recurrence of archaic rites has appeared on campus. A group of young men carry a nude sheeted male and then begin a ceremony of chants and laughter. It seems quite primitive.

THE KNIGHTS OF OLD saw their duty as protecting the integrity, innocence, and virginity of fair damsels. The respected knights of new (profs) defend dead homosexual novelists, demented scientists, whit rats, ruthless politicians, and alcoholic philosophers.

There are also squires found in the school. Although they are called knights, they exhibit their talents in differing forms of combat. A short while ago they undertook an invasion of Kansas City. Though they fought gallantly (in the tradition of old) they were defeated and returned quickly to the ivory tower. Casualties were nil but the injuries suffered were enlightening:one bruised pride, one floor burn, and eight hangovers.

History tells us of a middle-ages tradition which, when translated, means "outfly." When the peasants got restless, the lord and knights allowed them to fly out of their cottages. This tradition was characterized by widespread consumption of ale, promiscuity, and, in general, a complete break with the chains that bound them. There were even a few historical instances when young maidens gathered to melt down their chastity belts and then recast them into rings, necklaces, and other alluring ornaments. It is a demonic miracle that such a tradition can still be found in the 20th century.

THE GOVERNANCE OF WARTBURG is based on the ancient Chamber Theory. This theory purports that men, thrown into a chamber for a certain amount of time, will in fact change the status quo. The highest chamber is the Ecclesiastical Parliamentary Chamber. Known for its diversified and esteemed members EPC can and does change the state of affairs. Two peasants are allowed to participate at the round table--myself and another whose name I've misplaced. His neglect of responsibility for the other vassals is shocking.

Wartburg of today has one advantage over its ancestor. It has a program which uses the Chrysaliferizing approach. In laymen's terms Chrysaliferizing is the method to taking a moth, letting it do whatever it wants, and presto!--in a year and a half you have a self-realized, self-actualized, ethical, moral, and intellectual moth. As Bertolt Brecht said, "A Moth's a Moth."

ONE FINAL COMPARISON we must indulge in is that of individuals. A serf of old was naive, stupid, sad and struggling to live. The student of today is naive, intelligent, relatively happy and struggling to make a living. The student has looked past the ivory wall and found something real.

The student after four years leaves the mock society behind, a chance the serfs never got. And upon looking at Wartburg, students now and before find it one of the best feudal (futile) systems around.

U.S· No Super-Power Without Oil--from Africa

(Editor's note: This portion of Dick Gregory's convocation address of January, 1973, is the sixth in the series to be printed by the Wartburg Strumpet.)

"By the year of 1985 America will be runnin 15 million barrels of oil short everyday. Multiply that by 365 days and you'll understand how much oil we'll be runnin' short every year. And no nation can sell herself a super-power that's runnin' behind 15 million barrels of oil every day and there's only one nation on the face of this earth that we can get that oil from—that's Africa.

"That's right. I don't have to tell you. You knew somethin' was goin' on in Africa they hadn't told you about. Vice President Agnew went to Africa and stayed six weeks. Actin' like he was one of us. Over there just grinnin' and tommin'. They carried him out to the golf course in Nairobi one day and hit him in the head with a golf ball. He was just grinnin'.

"And you know somethin's goin' on in Africa—Dick Nixon sent his white wife to Africa by herself. Yeah. I picked up the paper-there she's got a daishiki on.

"Pope left the Vatican and went to Africa. Now, how many Catholics do you think are runnin' around in them bushes over there?

"America's tryin' to get into Africa; China's tryin' to get into Africa. Japan's tryin' to get into Africa and Russia's tryin' to get into Africa. And we happen to be the only country that's tryin' to get into Africa that has a Black problem."

It's May Term time again, and as we all know, the most exciting and interesting classes are to be found off-campus. In fact, any class offered away from Wartburg College is immediately filled with many bright-faced students wishing to get away from the campus.

Pictured is the group of eager students enrolled in Biology 363, Contemporary Hangnails. "Study stops" will be made at Watertown, South Dakota, to view the hangnails of Isaac Malcom, and Oaks, Oklahoma, to investigate growths on the feet of a local dirt farmer, Hank Rural. The class is especially enthused about their stop in Onawa, Iowa, whose mayor possesses a rare hangnail in the region of his hindquarters.

The class will return early (July 15) to draft a paper on their findings which will be presented at a meeting of the Student Senate.

FORMER VALPARAISO COACH AND NEW WARTBURG HEAD football coach, Dan Canfield, makes a rare speaking appearance in front of newspaper and television reporters and two unidentified microphones.

'Attack, Overwhelm, Maim'

Wartburg's new head football coach Don Canfield spoke the other day at a press conference. He expressed his "warm, heart-felt" wishes for the school and his more realistic expectations for the upcoming football campaign.

Coach Canfield related that, "It's no challenge to come to Wartburg as a sports enthusiast but I'm not so sure about coming as a football coach. I do, however, look forward to fitting in nicely with the generally jock-minded atmosphere here."

He went on to say, "Wartburg has a unique factor in that it's financially related to the American Lutheran Church and its local affiliates and that the Church still allows this though the college has long since permeated a Christian ethic to academics and its athletic program. This is fortunate so far as athletes as well as students are concerned."

Recruiting for the time being will be hard, but he plans to make phone calls and letter contact with more Black athletes in this area and Chicago.

"Some of my favorite athletes are Black," he said.

Upon talking to some of the team members Canfield concluded that "players here at Wartburg are not necessarily all losers. Granted, they didn't win much last season but I think that they want to prove even more this year to Wartburg college, the surrounding community and to themselves that football can still outdistance at least cross-country in popularity."

Conditioning, preparation and people who have got to win are the main ingredients in his coaching philosophy.

A masochist, Danfield likes going right at the defense with everything he's got. This leads to his lean toward the pro-formation or Wing-T.

While coaching at Valparaiso Canfield developed an insatiable lust for the 4-3 pro set defense with variations. The whole philosophy of this type of defense is to get at the offense and not "sit back and read." Attack, overwhelm, capitalize on mistakes, and maim. He also added that there will be a lot of emphasis on the kicking game.

Stenchtime

Golly, gee whiz, shuckydarn! As we all know, Wartburg's annual tiddleywinks tourney is coming up this Saturday. But first, how about testing the old memory with some tiddleywink trivia.

1. Who was the tiddleywink championship title-holder of the 1938 Kansas City Tournament?

2. What two women Physical Education faculty members played on the Wartette 0-12 tiddleywink team of 1914 and still have the warts to prove it?

So much for the trivia. This is gonna be a really big tournament! In the words of President John W. Bachman, "I'm really looking forward to seeing." He went on to say, "Yes," but later changed his mind.

Coach "Honest" Earnest Oppermann, the newly appointed Tiddleywinks team coach, is quoted as saying, "Our players have been working their fingers to the bone the last few weeks and we hope they make a fine showing."

An interesting aspect of the tournament was brought out by John Kurtt, Wartburg Athletic Director, in his comment, "An interesting aspect of the tournament is the fact that we're still using the same tiddleys used back in 1914 when the Wartettes earned their warts. But we feel since they cost us $32.50 originally, we have to make them last for a few more years."
